Recognize Albanian Integrity.
London, Dec. 20.—The six great European countries, England, France, Germany, Russia, Austria, and Italy have accepted the principle of an autonomous Albania with a provision guaranteeing to Serbia commercial access to the Adriatic sea. This is the first definite result of the ambassadors' conference, the third of which was held this afternoon.

Constantinople, Dec. 20.—The Turkish flag, which according to reports from Athens, was practically destroyed by Greek shells during the recent sea fighting off the Dardanelles straits, was presented today by the Sultan of Turkey with the historic flag flown by the battleship Mahmudieh at the bombardment of Sebastopol in 1854.

The captain of the flag ship was presented to the Sultan who congratulated him and the rest of the Turkish navy on the outcome of the action.

Exchange Messages.
It appears that the Turkish flag ship was struck by two Greek shells, but the damage done to the vessel was insignificant. One man on board was killed and eight others wounded.

During the so-called battle the commanders of the Turkish and Greek fleets exchanged pleasantries by wireless telegraph. The Greek admiral telegraphed "We have occupied the island of Tenedos and await your orders," to which the Turkish admiral replied, "Your shells are falling wide. I would recommend you to take better aim."

At a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night, a number of plans for the betterment of the university were formulated. An investigation of conditions in Madison, including saloons, dance halls, etc., is to be made. Reports were given and a plan of action adopted. It was also decided that a religious census of the city be taken by the students for the association and local churches as a basis for better co-operation on the part of the students. After this meeting eleven Bible classes were organized, to be led by the university pastors and Y. M. C. A. secretaries and members of the faculty, with an enrollment of over 200.

Of the recent Robins' campaign, one prominent member of the faculty is quoted as saying:

"This campaign, which is only one phase of the work of the university Y. M. C. A. has done more to elevate the moral and religious tone of this university than anything that has ever occurred during my twelve years of connection here. Two thousand young men turning out on a rainy Sunday afternoon to hear what everybody knew was to be a distinctly religious address is one of the most hopeful signs of the awakened moral and spiritual life that I have ever seen."

STUDENTS LEAVE ON MANY SPECIAL TRAINS

Exodus From Madison for the Christmas Holidays Has Begun.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, Wis., Dec. 20.—By tonight Madison will be settled down to comparative quiet, for most of the 4,500 university students have left to spend the holidays at home. The unusual feature about this holiday season is that about 200 of the men students are going to relate in their home town the story of what they consider the most remarkable thing that has ever happened at the university.

It is the story of the Robins' campaign. Practically all of the 4,000 men students at Wisconsin heard this great leader—Raymond Robins—during the recent campaign held under the auspices of the University Y. M. C. A. Hundreds heard him not once but several times. The total attendance at the five meetings which were addressed was 6,000. At the closing meeting several hundred of these students expressed their intention of living the life of Christian service which their leader graphically outlined to them.

When laying their campaign plans, some of the committee questioned whether they were not undertaking a proposition by holding the meeting in Music hall with a seating capacity of 1,000, but when that hall was taxed to its capacity Friday night it was unanimously agreed to move the closing meeting on Sunday afternoon to the gymnasium. Here for two hours 2,000 men listened to what many members of the faculty and students agreed was the greatest address of the kind ever delivered in Madison.

While these students were hearing Mr. Robins each night in Music Hall, 500 short course students were engaging in a like series of meetings under the leadership of "Dad" Elliott, inter-collegiate student secretary of the Y. M. C. A. At their closing meeting in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Sunday morning, over 200 short course students made decisions for the Christmas life. Some of the results of the campaign are already evident, according to Y. M. C. A. leaders.

During the holidays, students will visit over 100 towns throughout the state to report the campaign, as well as discussing the moral and religious conditions in the university. These teams will be made up of members of the Robins' Campaign Committee which comprises 150 men and from several hundred who became interested during the meetings. Gospel teams will also visit the towns of Oconomowoc, East Troy, Lake Geneva, and Evansville, where they will spend five days holding campaigns similar to the one recently held at the university. It will be the purpose of these student teams besides giving addresses each night in the town hall, under the union auspices of the local churches to conduct basketball games, cross country hikes, etc., and to participate generally in the sports of the boys of the community, for it is in their interest that the work is primarily planned. During three similar campaigns last year, large numbers of boys were interested in better living and several towns were led to clean up and made conditions for the boys more wholesome.

FACTS ON WORK AT UNIVERSITY GIVEN

Achievements of University Recounted in Handbook Published by Alumni Magazine.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Dec. 20.—The material achievements performed by the University of Wisconsin for the people of the state are recounted in exhaustive detail in a "handbook of information" published by the Wisconsin Alumni Magazine today in the December issue. The publication treats of the university of today, its services to the state, its aid to Wisconsin industries, the development of the state's agricultural resources, the elimination of waste, the crusade for public health, the advancement of public welfare, and the raising of standard of citizenship, in all of which the state university leadership is placed high. Under the head of finances of the university, the alumni association tells how expenditures are made, cites the compensation of officers and employees, and presents the cost of the university to the state.

The following facts about the university are taken from the "handbook":

An average of one Wisconsin citizen in ten has been the direct recipient of instruction either as one of nearly 10,000 graduates and former students scattered over the state, or as one of 2,000 farmer boys taking the short course, or as one of 3,000 dairy course students, or as one of the 8,000 correspondence students, past and present, or as one of the 155,000 annual participants in the farmers' courses and institutes, or as one of the 7,000 citizens who come in contact with the 2,450 package libraries sent out annually.

Other evidences of influence are the municipal reference bureau, which last year answered 3,000 inquiries from 123 Wisconsin cities; the hygienic laboratory, which examined annually 6,000 specimens for 1,215 physicians in 460 cities and villages; the university's 1,300 courses of instruction, and the 372,000 bound volumes and 134,000 pamphlets in Madison libraries, a corps of 500 graduates teaching in Wisconsin schools, reaching 40,000 children.

The 1,800 Wisconsin farms, owned or managed by former students of the college of agriculture, and the circulation of over 640,000 bulletins on farming annually.

Among the university's tangible services to the state the following are cited: Through its departments of chemistry and bacteriology it has helped to put a stop to the sale of adulterated foods, has avoided the outbreak of many epidemics, has encouraged sanitation in the school and home. Through its home economics department it is laying the foundation for a statewide campaign looking to reduction in the cost of living. Its department of political science is aiding cities and villages by placing the municipal reference bureau at their disposal. The college of engineering is pointing the way to the scientific development of the latest patenting, concrete, steel and other industries. The college of agriculture has aided much in making Wisconsin the leading butter and cheese state in the union, has increased the annual output of grains grown in the state by millions of dollars, has placed Wisconsin first in the country in the breeding of seeds, and has saved untold waste by its eradication of smut in oats and barley by its elimination of noxious disease, by its prevention of bovine tuberculosis, and by its inspection of nursery stock. The extension division has enabled the whole state "to go to college," has insured the continued success of some 275 civic and debating clubs in the state, has carried vocational instruction to many localities that cannot afford to provide for such training themselves, and furnished leaders to almost every community in the state. Each of these services to the state is taken up in detail in the "handbook."

Examples of economy by means of wholesale purchases are cited. It takes 25,000 tons of coal a year to heat the university buildings. Through competitive bidding the university gets its coal at $2.40 a ton, whereas as the retail price is $4.50. Fifteen to twenty carloads of baled shavings are annually used in the university, some of them for the heating of the buildings. The university saves the state from 30 to 40 percent on an annual "consignment" of $35,000. Through the sale of its by-products and receipts from technical inspections, the university produces about $275,000 of its available biennial income. Waste paper thrown away by students is collected and brings $6 a ton.

The university president is paid $7,000 a year, business managers $5,000, six deans, $4,000 to $5,000; 101 professors, $2,700 to $4,000; 150 associate assistant professors $1,600 to $2,750; 180 instructors $800 to $2,250; 150 assistants $400 to $800 for half time work; 100 stenographers, about $55 monthly.

IOWA SHEEP BREEDERS CONVENTION ASSEMBLES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Ottumwa, Ia., Dec. 20.—For the third time in its history the Iowa State Sheep Breeders' and Wool Growers' Association met here today in annual convention to remain in session two days. The attendance is large and the program is unusually interesting. Dr. C. D. Cline, of the Iowa State Agricultural College, is scheduled to deliver two lectures before the convention, one on the diseases of sheep and the other on feeding. Several noted sheep breeders will also deliver addresses.

At a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night, a number of plans for the betterment of the university were formulated. An investigation of conditions in Madison, including saloons, dance halls, etc., is to be made. Reports were given and a plan of action adopted. It was also decided that a religious census of the city be taken by the students for the association and local churches as a basis for better co-operation on the part of the students. After this meeting eleven Bible classes were organized, to be led by the university pastors and Y. M. C. A. secretaries and members of the faculty, with an enrollment of over 200.

A. has done more to elevate the moral and religious tone of this university than anything that has ever occurred during my twelve years of connection here. Two thousand young men turning out on a rainy Sunday afternoon to hear what everybody knew was to be a distinctly religious address is one of the most hopeful signs of the awakened moral and spiritual life that I have ever seen."

At a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. last night, a number of plans for the betterment of the university were formulated. An investigation of conditions in Madison, including saloons, dance halls, etc., is to be made. Reports were given and a plan of action adopted. It was also decided that a religious census of the city be taken by the students for the association and local churches as a basis for better co-operation on the part of the students. After this meeting eleven Bible classes were organized, to be led by the university pastors and Y. M. C. A. secretaries and members of the faculty, with an enrollment of over 200.

Of the recent Robins' campaign, one prominent member of the faculty is quoted as saying:

WHAT PRE-SELECT WILSON. said during the campaign in Bridgeport, Conn., about absent landlords. "As I stop in this particular place" said Mr. Wilson, "I cannot but think of the absentee landlords who own the thread industry, and do not live here. One of the difficulties of our whole political arrangement is that the people that run us don't have anything to do with us."

SPORT

Since the recent defeat of Mike Gibbons, Eddie McGorty's manager, Marty Forkins, has received three cablegrams from Monte Carlo fight promoters offering McGorty a match with Billy Papke for twenty rounds to take place the latter part of next month or early in February. Forkins wired to the promoters that McGorty would accept the match on a $10,000 guarantee together with transportation for two.

Massachusetts is some little old state when it comes to turning out horses. The best horses of the past season were produced there. Through the great speed and racing ability of Uhlman, Baden and Joe Patchen II the Bay state this year outranked both Kentucky and California as a producer of great horses.

Uhlman 1:58, is the fastest trotter living, while Baden, 2:05 1-5, won $26,000 on the grand circuit, and was the star of the stake horses. Joe Patchen II, though owned by a Manitoba horseman, and generally considered a Canadian pacer, was born in Massachusetts and was shipped to Canada when quite young.

Joe Tinker says Mordecai Brown isn't through as a big league pitcher. Tinker would like to give him a trial at Cincinnati.

Manager Callahan of the Chicago White Sox has almost pitched enough for the whole American league. There are sixteen on his roster, all of whom may go to California on the spring training trip. Maybe not so many will come back. Six are veterans—Walsh, White, Lange, Scott, Cicotte and Benz. The others who are to be tried out are George Johnson, an Indian from St. Joseph; Miller, a coast league graduate who has been farmed out for several years by Comiskey; Smith of Birmingham; Woodring of St. Joseph; Wolfgrang, of Lowell, Mass.; Clark of Vancouver, and Russell of Ft. Worth.

Manager Evers, Jimmy Sheppard, Ed Reabach and Frank Shulte are the sole remnants of the great team which Frank Chance had when he took charge of the Chicago Cubs in 1906. All the others have faded away. Orvie Overhill, Jack Pfeister, John Kling, Harry Steinfield, Mordecai Brown, Artie Hoffman, Joe Tinker and Frank Chance are members of the "Old Cub Guard" who have been let out since the beginning of the 1911 season.

OBITUARY.

COACH WILL NAME MEMBERS OF BASKETBALL TEAM SOON

The basketball team will be picked some time next week. This was the announcement made today by Coach Curtis. This is necessary for the fact that team work must be developed into the two new forwards which are practically in doubt. Edward Atwood is one of the likely men, with Dalton a close rival for the other position. Ryan and L. Stewart are out now and Kuhl and Stickney are playing a much improved game over last week. The fight is close, and neither of these six men are outplaying each other. Just who will compose the forward wall is a question not yet answered. Practice may be necessary next week to allow a chance to these three close competitors for the forward positions.

JOHN DOUGHERTY SENTENCED TO SOJOURN BEHIND BARS

Given Term of Ten Days and $10 Fine and Costs or Twelve Additional Days.—Five for Nuntz.

After many days passed in front of the bars consuming draught upon draught of bottled mischief, John Dougherty is to have a taste of life behind the bars. Not that he is to become a bartender, for the bars are of the kind that enforce abstinence from the seducing glass. On his pleading guilty to being found intoxicated, Judge Fifield this morning sentenced him to ten days in the county jail and to pay a fine of $10 and costs or stay in jail twelve days more.

John Nuntz, a young man, who was picked up, parading drunk in front of the Ameronah greenhouse, South Main street last evening, entered a plea of guilty and in default of a fine of $2 and costs got five days in jail.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE GIRLS GIVE DINNER

Edgerton High School Students Entertain Faculty at an Elaborate Four Course Dinner.—Other News.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edgerton, Dec. 20.—The domestic science group of girls, who for the past few weeks have been conducting domestic science as an experiment in the high school, demonstrated the practical value of their knowledge in a six o'clock dinner given to the faculty of the high school last night. The dinner was served in Miss Brunner's recitation room. In this room tables are used instead of desks and chairs instead of seats. The girls very tastefully arranged the tables. The decorations and general arrangements were very pretty.

The supper was served in four courses, everything served being made by the girls. Members of the class also served the dinner and did it in excellent style. Miss Brenner and the class deserve high praise for the excellent work done.

PHILOTAHAN SOCIETY HAS CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

The Laurean Society had no regular meeting last night at the high school owing to the fact that several members are in the Christmas play to be given today. The Philotaxion, however, had a meeting which proved interesting to its hearers. Their program was a Christmas affair, and was begun with a solo rendered by Orpha Baumgardner. An original Christmas story was read by Frances Brown. Francis Recollections of Santa Claus." Miss Harriet Mulligan was next with several selections on the piano, with Bessie Buell ending the program with a piano selection. The meeting was in all an enjoyable one.

WEATHER FORECAST.

THE RECALL PETITION.

A careful analysis of the names signed to the recall petitions—which appears in another part of the paper—indicates that some of these signatures were attached, before the full significance of the issue was understood. This is the only charitable construction, and it is only fair to give this class of men the benefit of the doubt.

The preamble to the petition talks about incompetency and extravagance and doubtless led some people to believe that this was the issue, but that is the merest subterfuge. The one and only issue is the issue of law enforcement, and but for the fact that men had a grievance, on that account, the recall movement would not have been born.

One of the questions which is just now disturbing the new candidates for office, and the men responsible for their selection is, "What will be the attitude of the Gazette, and what treatment may be expected."

The emissary sent to the paper to propound this question, went away informed, and the public is entitled to know, as well because there is nothing to conceal and the campaign to be waged is a great deal broader than a newspaper campaign. The question is now before the court of public opinion, the tribunal of last resort.

The Gazette wants to say once for all that the paper entertains no ill-will towards any man in the city, and if it did its columns would not be used to retaliate. The paper is not in sympathy with some of the methods employed by some of the men in the city, who seem to regard regulative laws as a burden. It has denounced these methods and will continue to denounce them, as they are a menace to both public and private welfare.

The three men who are seeking to replace the commissioners now in office, have assumed the roll of public characters. They are going before the people asking for suffrage and seeking to become public servants. The people have a right to know of their qualifications and what they represent.

Under ordinary circumstances the Gazette would be warranted in discussing these men from every angle, but the chances are that their names will never be mentioned, as the paper would not support them if they were arch-angels.

The issue is so much larger than men, that the individual is insignificant, and as the campaign advances, this fact will be thoroughly impressed. The people are to decide whether the laws pertaining to morality and common decency are to be enforced or ignored.

It matters not what the platform promulgated from the Eagles' hall convention, may promise, or how high sounding may be its platitudes. This will in no way change the issue. The city now has a commission which is endeavoring to enforce the law. What more would a new commission accomplish, along this line? This is one of the times when it is wise to let well enough alone, and the people will so decide.

The city of Appleton has cut down its tax levy $14,000 and the people are complimenting the commission for economy in administration. The commission form of government is so universally satisfactory that many cities are preparing to adopt it. The principle is right, and commends itself to all unprejudiced minds.

The democratic congress, to convene in April, is pledged to free sugar, and the beet sugar districts are much disturbed, as to what may happen. There is little chance of the tariff being removed, as the fifty millions revenue is needed for running expenses.

Seven and one-half carloads of cold storage eggs are being sold by the women of Chicago today, at 24 cents per dozen, which is about half the retail price. The ultimate consumer is reaping the benefits of a demoralized corner in the egg market.

HALL & SAYLES
"The Reliable Jewelers"

According to the recall petitions, one little hotel on the west side had seventeen voters, who had a grievance. They were perhaps burdened with taxes, and shocked by the city's extravagance, and sighed for relief.

A term in the pen usually costs a man his right of franchise, but is no bar to signing a recall petition.

A Novel Memory Test—For The Best Memories Twenty Prizes.

Some people say "I simply can't remember names, but I never fail to recognize faces." Others say just the opposite. They can remember names but not faces.

It is altogether a matter of memory. And as memory often proves to be a very important factor in life, it pays to train and cultivate it.

In our next issue this newspaper will submit to you a very novel but true test of your memory.

It consists of a remarkable composite photograph of "People Every body Should Know."

Undoubtedly you have seen each portrait in the group at some time or other. You have seen them published scores of times in publications of all kinds. These, of course, you can recognize instantly, but the number you can name depends largely on how well your memory serves you and how observing you are.

Kings of Empire, of Finance, of Politics, of Opera, of Literature, of Invention—Kings of all kinds—will be included in the remarkable illustration to be published by this newspaper—not to mention the reigning Queens of today.

The group includes three of the richest men in the world. You can probably identify two of them at a glance. But comparatively few people can identify the third. If you can, it may make your list just large enough to win a reserved seat for Lyman H. Howes' Travel Festival at the Myers Theatre Wednesday Dec. 25 and Thursday Dec. 26, matinee Wednesday, Dec. 25. You may not need the extra name in order to have your list included in the twenty nearest correct, but in case you do, here are a few "tips" concerning this mysterious Croesus. He is a man whose tastes one moment are ultra-modern and the next he revels in barbaric Oriental Splendour. He is a potentate of the East who, today is all that is progressive and up-to-date in science, while tomorrow he reverts to Eastern customs and the mysterious glamour of by-gone centuries. His whole life is a startling procession of blinding contrasts. For several hours he indulges in golf, tennis, roams through his immense treasure vaults or motors in cars of the most luxurious and powerful type. Shortly after he may be seen on an elephant bearing a howdah of solid gold—an exact counterpart of those upon which sat enthroned monarchs of tens of centuries ago. He has gorgeous palaces, fabulous heaps of precious stones, gold and silver—the richest treasure hoards in the world—even though he does not "look the part." Another "tip." In addition to his life of extraordinary incongruities he was very much in the limelight within a year because of an act that shocked an entire nation on account of its daring defiance of ceremonial. Furthermore he has a pronounced preference for Americans and American institutions which he showed by sending his sons to a great American University. While he might easily be taken for a typical American "Captain of Industry," he is in fact a despot of the most approved Oriental type, although an enlightened despot who distributes his vast revenues throughout his dominions among a population of over four million people over whom he wields almost absolute power of life and death.

You will see him in the illustration in our next issue combined with American Presidential Possibilities (and one of two impossibilities)—with the

"THE GREAT DIVIDE."

"The Great Divide," the long awaited great American play, which is booked to appear at Myers Theater on Sunday, December 22, is heralded by the most knowing critics as the most absorbing ever produced. The first two acts are laid in Arizona in the heart of that great Continental divide, which separates our East from our West—and the third act in Massachusetts. The drama might be called a struggle between the spirit of the East and the spirit of the West. It tells the romance of an Eastern woman whose life and habits descend from a long line of Puritan ancestors, and a Western man, as untrammelled in mind and action as the plains and mountains which he roamed.

The purpose of the play is to show how these two contrasted natures were brought together and to prove that love between man and woman whose methods of living, beliefs and manners have nothing in common, can be overcome by the great divide which separates them. The production is one of the most beautiful now touring the West.

The cast is one of the most evenly balanced gathered together by S. S. Primrose, owner of the play and who is responsible for such excellent attractions as "The Thief," "The House of a Thousand Candles," "Paid in Full," etc.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

CHRISTMAS.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

CHRISTMAS is a day on which everybody celebrates except father and the mail carrier. By the time Christmas morning rolls around, father has become so shortwinded writing checks that he folds up in bed like a pocket rule, and by Christmas night the mail carrier has a gait like an Arabian dromedary with a stone bruise. Nobody pays any attention to these two beasts of burden, however, and all they are allowed to do is to buy and perjure.

Nobody pays any attention to these two beasts of burden, however, and all they are allowed to do is to buy and perjure.

Christmas is a day on which everybody celebrates except father and the mail carrier. By the time Christmas morning rolls around, father has become so shortwinded writing checks that he folds up in bed like a pocket rule, and by Christmas night the mail carrier has a gait like an Arabian dromedary with a stone bruise. Nobody pays any attention to these two beasts of burden, however, and all they are allowed to do is to buy and perjure.

Let us do our yearly swearing ere the New Year rush begins, dumping all the load we're bearing of our plain and fancy sins. It has always been the custom from our evil ways to steer, and our habits ill—dud bust 'em on the first day of the year; thus the bright Recording Angel suffers from the writer's cramp, and a little timely change'll make his eyes glow like a lamp. Ah, that angel ceases smiling as SWEARING OFF he files our vows away, when he sees ore day; and he sighs: "Why can't those critters shake their little lists of sins, count out cards, cigars and bitters, ere the New Year rush begins? It is rough upon a scrup to be working overtime, and I sometimes wouldn't care if they adhered to sin and crime." It is well to cross the border from licentiousness to grace, if we give the tired recorder time to use his resting place; it is well that hearts are warming with resolves to seek the dawn, but we should do our reforming ere the New Year rush is on.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE AGE OF SIMPLICITY.

THE OTHER day I had occasion during the search for a certain house to walk up and down some of the finest streets in this city, past the homes not of the wealthiest class, but of the most cultured and educated, and one thing impressed me very strongly about these homes, the fact that many of the windows were utterly without draperies. There was a time when a window screened only by an ordinary window blind was the sign of dire poverty. The wealthy had their expensive lace draperies; the middle class had curtains of net or muslin; the poorer folks had their ghastly imitations of the wealthy;—only the windows of the penniless were bare of draperies.

Today, the undraped window, into which sunlight and air can come unobstructed, is to be found in the homes of the upper middleclass.

Don't you think this is a good sign of the times?

I do.

I think it means that the age of superfluity in household furnishings is giving way to the age of simplicity.

We are rapidly getting rid of carpets in favor of the cleanliness and simplicity of bare floors and rugs. Nay more, the rugs themselves are growing fewer. There was a time when the thickness of a man's parlor carpet was an index to his wealth. Today the nakedness of his drawing-room or living-room floor is almost a sign of poverty.

I know one lovely house where the only rug in the living-room is a beautiful tiger skin thrown down in front of the open fire, and another expensive house where there is not a sign of a rug in either of the big drawing-rooms.

Of course, there is danger of going too far in simplicity, as we have been too far in superfluity, but considering the American temperament I think that is small. Think how many rooms you know that are unattractive because they have too little, and the proportion ought to reassure you as to any immediate danger of our making our homes too bare. The average person could remove from one quarter to one half the furnishings and bric-a-brac in his living-room without making it bare. And by so doing he would add dignity and value to what he left. A few objects attract and hold the eye; a great many confuse and repel it.

Look around your home today and ask yourself if you cannot make it more dignified and beautiful by making it more simple.

t. cream, 1 c; almond paste, 1-4 c; salt, 1-2 tsp.

Utensils—Double boiler, measuring cup, tablespoon, teaspoon, sieve. Directions—Add the onion sliced, celery and parsley to the stock in the double boiler. Cook slowly until tender and strain. Rub butter and flour together in the double boiler and gradually add the hot stock, season and cook for at least ten minutes, then add the cream and almond paste; blend all thoroughly.

The KITCHEN CABINET

HOW little it costs, if we give it a thought, to make happy some heart each day, just one kind word, or a tender smile, as we go on our daily way.

PORK, A WINTER MEAT.

During the cold winter months our bodies need more fuel to keep us warm, and pork, then, has its innings. Little pigs from four to six weeks old are the piece de resistance for many epicures.

Pork, containing such a large percent of fat, is a valuable food for body heat, though it is hard of digestion.

Pork Chops.—Pork chops, when well cooked, are a most popular meat, but dried and tasteless, as they are more than often served, most unsatisfactory.

Place the chops in the frying pan with just enough water to cover the bottom of the pan; parboil uncovered until the water has evaporated, then the chops will quickly brown. Season and serve a juicy chop well done without being cooked to a crisp.

Cored, unpeeled apples fried in the remaining fat, sprinkled with a little sugar to give them a color, make a nice garnish for the platter of pork chops.

Barbecued Ham.—Soak thin slices of ham an hour in lukewarm water; drain, wipe and cook in a hot frying pan, until slightly browned. Remove to the platter and add to the fat in the pan three tablespoonfuls of vinegar mixed with a teaspoonful of mustard, half a teaspoon of sugar and a few dashes of paprika. When thoroughly hot pour over the ham and serve.

Perfect Fit.

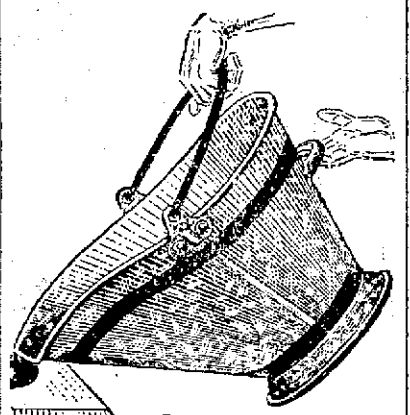

Billie's mamma bought him some nice, new white duck pants. The first time they were washed they shrunk.

Billie went out to play. In five minutes he was back with his plaintive wail:

"Mamma, I can't wear these pants; they're tighter than my skin."

"Why, that's impossible, Billie," said mamma. "Nothing could be tighter than your skin."

"But those pants are tighter, mamma," he cried. "I can sit down in my skin, but I can't sit down in these pants."

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My husband is so mean to me. We are married eight years. I left him once. He promised to be good, but now that I am back he is no better. He says no one can cook like me, but he is so quarrelsome and ever so often he turns the house upside down. What shall I do? We have one child. BROKENHEARTED.

It looks to me as if he wanted his good cook back.

Suppose you take the child and go away every time you see a bad spell coming. Maybe he will learn to be good if he knows you will stay away during his quarrelsome times.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 15 years old. A young man has called on me occasionally, but my parents object to him because he is of a different religion than I and they refuse to let him come to see me and I don't like to meet him any place but home. I like him very much because he is a good boy and has excellent habits and an excellent character, too. What would you advise me to do? He doesn't know my parents object to him. ANXIOUS GIRL.

If you are well enough acquainted with him, tell him that your parents object to your friendship with a person of different religion.

Perhaps he will have some suggestion to make if he is anxious to keep up the friendship. It seems too bad to give up a good friend for such a reason, for different religions are really only different ways of looking at the same thing.

You are right in thinking that home is the place to entertain a young man.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)How can I wash bearskin cloth to get good results? (2) What is a simple remedy for blackheads? (3)—Is tan much worn this winter? (4)—Should a girl of 15 wear ribbon in her hair? (5)—Can you give me a good salmon salad recipe? (6)—Am I a good writer? (7)—What should be the most appropriate color for a February bride's gown? Cora W.

(1)—Just use a good white soap and warm water; sponge the cloth up and down in the suds, rinse in warm water, and when well rinsed hang out to dry, without wringing. (2)—Massage your face every night with cleansing cold cream, after bathing the face with warm water and a good toilet soap. Squeeze out the worst blackheads without bruising the skin and apply a little peroxide to the spot. Keep the skin clean, take at least one warm bath a week, drink plenty of pure water and eat as many fruits and vegetables as possible.

(3)—The fashionable colors are in the darker shades. (4)—She may. (5)—Salmon salad—Shred 1 can salmon, add a little celery cut in small pieces, mix with mustard dressing and serve cold. Mustard dressing: 1 cup vinegar, 1-2 cup water; put on to boil in a bowl mix 1 teasp. mustard, 1 teasp. salt, 1-2 teasp. butter or olive oil, 1 dessert spoon flour and 1 egg. Mix well and pour slowly into boiling vinegar, stirring until it creams.

(6)—You write legibly. (7)—White is always the most appropriate color for a bride's gown.

ADULT AGE LOWERING.

That a large proportion of American people are living in a constant state of auto-intoxication or food drunkenness, is the opinion of the examiners of American Life Insurance companies, expressed at their recent meeting at Des Moines, as a result of which there is a constant lowering of the average age of adult life, while the general death rate is decreasing as a result, chiefly of improved infant feeding and better sanitary conditions and protection of food from infection and adulteration. The people need to learn the principles of diet and health as taught in these Hints.

WHY FAMOUS PASTRY COOKS USE KC BAKING POWDER

The patrons of our first class hotels and restaurants are exacting—they demand the best. Women go where the pastry and cakes are noted for their excellence. Men are attracted by hot bread and biscuits—when fresh and moist and light.

The pastry cook with a reputation uses K. C. Baking Powder because he knows that results are certain; every time everything is as good as his best.

Then, too, with K.C. Baking Powder he can mix the various kinds of batter before the rush of the meal begins and bake as needed so that every order goes to the table fresh and hot, yet the last he bakes are just as good as the first.

The reasons behind these reasons is that K. C. is really a blend of two baking powders. One commences to give off leavening gas as soon as moistened. The other requires both moisture and heat to make it active. Dough or batter will remain in a partially leavened condition for hours, and when put in the oven, will come up as light as if mixed a moment before.

For cookies, pancakes, doughnuts and the like, which cannot all be baked at once, K. C. is indispensable. For all baking the doubleraise makes doubly certain.

Follow the example of the professional cook and your baking will be equal to his.

Inevitably.

If a woman could by wishing make sure either of going to heaven or being free from wrinkles she would decide to try to get to heaven some other way.

Domestic Science DEPARTMENT

CONDUCTED BY Mrs. Alice Mitchell Kirk

The Christmas Table. The ever-vivid scene of Bethlehem—a father, a mother and a child are there. No religion which began like that could ever lose its character. The first unit of human life, the soul, is there in the new personality of childhood. But the second unit of human life is just as truly represented there, in the family, and so we take up the angel symphony and give it new breath, this gladstone day in "Glory to God in the highest and on Earth Peace."

In this family at the Christmas season there is not the same desire for feasting as on other holidays; but with little gifts of love and wreaths of holly and greens of all kinds, with the Christmas bells, it tells the story of gladness and joy and peace. Decorate the homes and the table with all the Christmas spirit you can put into each. It lasts for days and sometimes for weeks—yes, years. Very much longer than mere food, which is soon forgotten.

The general color scheme for decoration of the home table and most effective often in the food, is red and green. The centerpiece of the table may have for its foundation the top of a candy ball, or a similar piece of wood. Near the edge make two small holes, one on each side, wind a piece of wire twenty inches long for the handle, with red ribbon or crepe paper and then with holly. Cover the board with a paper dolly, stock 1 quart; butter, 1 t; flour, 2 then shape the decorated wire in the form of an arch or handle and insert the ends in the holes, bending the wire underneath to hold it firmly in place.

Hang three little Christmas bells at the top; conceal the edges of the board with a thick wreath of the holly. In the center heap simple and attractively wrapped gifts for the guests. Four tall candlesticks containing red candles and ornamented with sprigs of holly should form a square around this circle. Do not put on shades. A Christmas greeting should be on cards at each place. All this adds to the spirit, and that is what makes Christmas—not costly presents.

A suggestive menu is given. It may be added to with a first course of grape fruit and the main course followed by entrees of little oyster or chicken pies or small birds, either broiled, roasted or casserole. And preceding all there might be the Christmas punch. Or, if not desired so elaborate, the oysters and soup course might be omitted and begin with the main course.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, December 20, 1872.

The Holly Water Works.
Estimate of the Cost of the Works for Janesville: Hon. Hamilton Richardson, who in conjunction with the common council committee appointed by Mayor Sutherland, has interested himself in the project to supply Janesville with water by means of the Holly system, has received from the officers of the Holly company an estimate of the cost of the works and a diagram of the system of pipes necessary to accomplish the object. The estimate contemplates about five miles of water pipe, engine and pump house, machinery for pumping, sixty-nine hydrants and twenty-three stop valves to which must be added the cost of a site and the water power for propelling the machinery. The pipe for conveying water to different parts is of six sizes: 12, 10, 8, 6, 5 and 4 inches. The total cost of the proposed works would be $87,010.46. The total in dollars and cents is unpleasant for taxpayers to contemplate, considering the present scarcity of money. The plan is to issue bonds for the amount, to be paid, when due, from a fund by a tax on the water—each family supplied by the works to pay a certain sum annually—and the amount to be saved each year by the abolishment of our fire department and the reduction in insurance rates.

A Night in the County Jail: About fifty of Sheriff Pemberton's friends invaded the jail last night for the purpose of paying their respects to that official whose term of office expires with the present year. The Janesville Quadrille Band accompanied the party and furnished pleasant music to which the company danced until the morning hours were well advanced. The severity of the weather prevented the attendance of many who had made arrangements to be present. Mr. and Mrs. Pemberton made things exceedingly pleasant for those who took part in the evening's enjoyment and none of the party have cause to regret their night in jail.

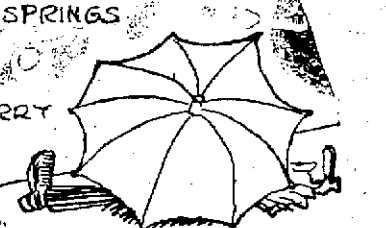

Brief Items: The Cornus club danced at Mitchell's hall last night. John Watson has commenced his annual harvest of ice for summer use.

Felt the Sting of Failure.
"What," asked the hunter who had mistakenly shot a guide, bending down eagerly, "is your name?" "Smith," gasped the guide, with his last breath. The hunter's face fell. "And I came up here," he exclaimed, ruefully, "in pursuit of rare game!"—Puck.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

BUSTING BRONX.
It was in the West. Occasionally a pommel could be heard in the distance. Now and then the horse cry of a lariat broke the silence.

Helen Mackabooze saw with a start of pity that the handsome cowboy was crying. A cowboy crying! Oh, la!

"Why?" she asked tenderly. "Why these weeps, man of the prairie? Methought our broncho busters were made of sterner stuff!" (The fair thing had just been reading Shakespeare.)

He gulped convulsively. A snarling corral bounded up a distant mountain pursued by prairie dogs.

"Why?" pursued the beautiful girl. "Grief so terrible in a man so strong must be some grief to listen to. Tell me, thou, why?"

With streaming eyes he motioned her out of the clicking camera's path. A stirrup moaned plaintively in the neighboring bills.

"Because," he gulped brokenly, "the moving picture public insists on having 'em sad nowadays. 'Boo, hoo!'"

Overhead a broncho chirped.

For Christmas Everybody Wants a Leakless PARKER GIFT PEN

EVERY presents that people want—that everybody wants. Make one of your Christmas lists this year entirely with Parker Gift Pens.

There are plain Parkers, fancy Parkers, Parkers of rich design, even Parkers set with diamonds and pearls. Prices from $2.50, $3.50, $5.00, according to size and ornamentation.

Besides making handsome presents, Parker Fountain Pens please everyone—because they're leakless.

Why do Parker Pens never leak or smear your fingers? Because—

An ordinary fountain pen has a straight feed tube which carries ink to the pen point. Now some inkdrops always stay in this straight tube—even when pen is point up, in your pocket.

And when the heat of your body—38 degrees—gets to the pen, it causes air in the barrel of the pen to expand and push up through the feed tube to escape. This pushes those ink drops up and out around the nozzle, smearing the writing and of pen, and taking your fingers when you remove the pen-cap to write.

THE PARKER IS DIFFERENTLY MADE.

Parker Pens write smoothly. Their ink gold nibs, tipped with hardest iridium, never scratch. Their Feed Ink Control, by regulating ink flow, absolutely prevents dripping or blotting.

The new Disappearing Ink gives light, but slips flat out of the way when you write.

NEW PARKER JACK KNIFE SAFETY RAZOR.

Is safe from cutting—even when upside down. Beautiful designs $2.50, $3.50, $5.00 and up. Handsome gift boxes free with all Christmas Parkers.

Dealers sell Parkers up to 100% more than the real value of the pens.

Refunded within ten days of purchase, if unsatisfactory.

Last year hundreds of people gave Parker Pens to everybody on their Christmas lists. Try it this year, and see the new Christmas pleasure you will give.

If your dealer doesn't keep Parkers, write us and we'll fit your orders direct. Send today.

HIS RISE TO POWER

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER.

Author of "The Man Higher Up"

Copyright, 1911, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Sentiment," declared Murchell solemnly, "has crystallized. Dunmudee's man." He explained that this decision had been reached by him, to the view of the evident wish of the people, and he added truthfully that he had not seen nor discussed the approaching convention with John Dunmudee. The Murchell men in the organization whined with delight.

The day before, the convention the delegates began to gather at the capital. In parlor A of the State hotel sat Murchell and his partner B of the fashionable sat Sherrod, playing against each other for votes. Between them fluted the delegates and those who had delegates to sell, like hungry summer flies. But they found the little fellow at least no honey pit at Murchell's end; no scandal must ruin the nomination of Dunmudee. As for the captains of tens and captains of hundreds, that is another matter, into which we may not intrude.

Inaccreditable streets, and sweltering, smoke clouded lobbies excitement ran high. The Dunmudee rallying ground, the only quiet spot in the capital, contrasted significantly with the nervous atmosphere of the Sherrod headquarters. Such contentment with the situation could not be feigned. It was infectious; it spread out among the delegates who had pledged themselves to vote for Dunmudee and utilized the frantic efforts of Parrott (nominally managing Sherrod's campaign) to start a stampede; it kept the neutrals wavering.

And over the scene of conflict hovered a formless one, unseen, unheard, unfelt, as spirits always are, waiting but for the crucial moment to swoop down and decide the issue.

Came a bill in the hall, an hour toward morning, when the delegates had retired to allotted cots or halves of beds or, more often, to woe fortune over some table of chance, when the pecking lobbies were depopulated and the headquarters of the generals were deserted by all but their respective staffs and the yawning reporters.

There was a knock on Murchell's door and Greene, leader in Plumville, admitted a messenger, him who once before had lured Murchell from his retreat on an errand, if not of mercy, at least of salvation. Pain went to him and whispered his message. Murchell shook his head.

"Tell him," he said aloud, "if he wants to see me he'll have to come here."

Paine whispered a protest. "Tell him," Murchell cut him short. "John Benth will meet him here."

The messenger started, looked hastily around at the others and grinned in quickly fashion. But he departed immediately, leaving the men in the room to wonder what charm lay in the unfamiliar name of John Benth.

In less than five minutes, rumor out-running the fact, the hotel was alive. Sherrod had asked for a conference with Murchell.

Murchell men smiled triumphantly when they saw Parrott and Sherrod, wearing an air of confidence not wholly convincing, emerge from the elevator and make their way along the corridor to parlor A.

Sherrod and Parrott entered, carefully closing the door behind them to the intense disappointment of the delegates outside. Parrott went jauntily up to Murchell and shook hands.

"Well," he grinned, "we've been having a fine little shindy, eh?" This for the reporters.

"Glad," grinned Murchell, "you're enjoying it." There was a laugh, in which Parrott did not join.

The senator waved his hand, and all but Greene left the room, reluctant, but obedient.

"See here," said Sherrod. "Can't we get together? You've got to admit that we've got you beaten."

"If you think the delegates you've been buying will stick you're mistaken, Sherrod. I've sold you more than fifty myself."

"I don't believe it," snapped Sherrod. "Quit bluffing and get down to cases."

Your know you can't beat us in the convention. You aren't trying to. You started all this racket over Dunmudee just to work up a sentiment that will make it harder for me to beat Brent. You're so anxious to get even," he exclaimed bitterly, "that you don't see you're in danger of stirring up a revolution. What will you take to quit?"

"The revolution has started, Sherrod. And you'll never beat Brent."

"Won't I? We'll attend to that when the time comes."

"Because," Murchell continued calmly, "you won't be nominated." He turned to the governor. "Parrott, how much have you paid Sherrod to support you for senator?"

"Nothing," lied Parrott, albeit with evident uneasiness.

"Then you're lucky," Murchell commented. "Dan Hasland paid him $200,000 for the same promise."

"That's a lie," Sherrod declared hotly.

"Greene," commanded Murchell, "call Hasland in, will you? He's in the room next to mine. That is, if Parrott and Sherrod think it necessary?" He turned inquiringly toward them.

"I guess," Sherrod growled, "Parrott knows I'll not go back on him."

"Does he?" Murchell inquired dryly. "Look at him!"

And indeed, Parrott's face just then showed anything but implicit confidence in the good faith of his leader.

"You needn't go, Greene. And," Murchell added, "I may announce right here that Hasland will succeed me as senator."

"Doesn't that depend?" sneered Sherrod, "on who controls the legislature?"

"We'll control it."

Greene could have hugged himself with delight as he saw Parrott visibly perturbed and Sherrod struggling to repress the rising, passionate bated and fear of the man before him. Greene had been a gambler and he felt a profound reverence for the man whose nerve in so big a game showed no tremor.

A long pause was broken by Parrott anxiously. "Senator, what have you got up your sleeve?"

"Sherrod's withdrawal."

"Who is going to make me withdraw?" Sherrod sneered again.

"Didn't Paine give you my message? John Benth!"

"Who," demanded Parrott, "is John Benth?"

Murchell pointed to Sherrod's face, which had suddenly turned pale. "He is a gentleman of whom Sherrod is very much afraid. Parrott, did you ever hear why I came to the capital last March? I came because I heard Sherrod here was drunk and threatening to throw himself into the river. I found out why—he had embezzled $300,000 of state moneys. We fixed the matter up temporarily."

He paused, straightened up in his chair, eyed Sherrod for a moment and went on quietly: "If your name goes before the convention, I will take the floor and tell all about that transaction. I don't think you will be nominated. And, if you are, I'm quite sure you won't be elected. Do you withdraw?"

"I do not!"

"Very well," Murchell rose to indicate that the conference was at an end. "Come on, Parrott," Sherrod wheeled and marched toward the door. But Parrott did not follow. Instead, he dropped weakly into a chair, his glance shifting uncertainly from Murchell to the departing Sherrod and back again.

Sherrod's hand was already on the doorknob when he noticed Parrott's defection. He stopped, looking back. "Come along," he repeated impatiently.

"I think," said Parrott slowly, "I'll stay here. I've had one gold brick too many."

"What?" Sherrod turned sharply and strode over to the vacillating governor. "You booby! Scared by a cheap bluff like that? Do you think he means it? He doesn't use it. Sure, I'll prove it to you."

He whistled to face Murchell, pointing. "There is the door. Bill Murchell, and on the other side of it a half dozen reporters. Don't wait for the convention. Call 'em in. Make good your bluff, if you dare!"

For a moment the senator looked intently at the ugly, passionate face.

"Call them in, Greene," he said quietly.

Greene went to the door, opened it and beckoned to the reporters. They filed into the parlor promptly. Murchell turned to them.

"Gentlemen, I want to dictate a statement." Notebooks were dashed forth and pencils poised. But Murchell did not continue, and the reporters did not look at him. Their eyes were riveted on Sherrod, upon whose face had fallen a look of unbelieving wonderment. The

"Make good your bluff if you dare."

wonderment became fear. Beads of sweat stood out on his forehead. He shook visibly. The defiant attitude suddenly dissolved.

"Perhaps," said Murchell grimly, "Mr. Sherrod would prefer to make this statement himself."

There was a moment of painful silence. Sherrod's mouth worked as though he were trying to speak. But no sound fell.

Parrott came to his relief. "Gentlemen," he said solemnly, "Mr. Sherrod has withdrawn his candidacy."

"In favor of Dunmudee," supplemented Greene.

The reporters looked inquiringly at Senator Murchell.

He nodded. "That's the statement. Without a single backward glance and he went out of the room. Greene and the reporters followed him, leaving Sherrod and Parrott alone to get what comfort they could out of their plight, and to settle certain accounts, a scene upon which we considerably draw the curtain.

A man around whom a battle had been fought leaned on a rail fence, gazing off at the undulating blue where the azure of sky curved down to meet the green of hills. He had been there most of the afternoon, in flight from the kindly but obtrusive interest of his neighbors.

A state was acclaiming him, and he was not uplifted. He had read the news of the morning and knew that at that very hour several hundred of his fellow citizens in "convention" assembled were naming him to a high honor, and he took no joy in it. For the acclamation was but the schooled chorus of a tractable stage mob. And the victory was not for him, nor for the principle he had served, but for a man whom he had condemned, for an institution he believed to be wrong. He was big enough—or small enough if you prefer—to resent being outplayed into power by the strength of another's arm, and he was honest enough to hate the means he knew must have been used. He could not exit. The advancement had come too late. The fiery eagerness of youth was gone.

He lounged not for a sword, but for peace—the peace of the hills, or of the growing things, of the commonplace from which once he had fled.

A sound, strange for that hour and place, slowly pierced his abstraction. He raised his head, startled, listening. It was the courthouse bell. Another joined in, and another, until all the bells of the town were ringing. The iron chorus was for him!

He walked slowly on.

As he rounded the foot of the knob, he heard another sound rising to mingle with the chimor of the bells—cheering voices. He had a strong desire to turn back and flee to some hiding place to the hills, but he forced himself to march forward.

At the northernmost edge of the town he perceived a rapidly lumping figure. It was Jeremy Appleton.

"Heard you came out this way," Jeremy gasped, "and I wanted to be first to tell you. Nominated by acclamation at 3:45 this afternoon! I didn't feel so good since Appomattox."

John, beholding the tears shining in honest Jeremy's eyes, felt the moisture to his own. His heart leaped sharply; it was something to receive, even if one has not earned, such loyalty!

Down Main street came a team drawing a double seated spring wagon. From the wagon descended a silent trio, whose handclasp eloquently told what awkward lips could not phrase.

"Drive into town to get the news of the convention?" "Ri explained. "They said you'd gone out the pike, so we drove out to fetch ye in. They're waiting for ye, considerable excited."

"They're found out," said Dan Criswell dryly, "at about that ye're a great man."

"Low I damned the American people a mile too soon," confessed Sykes, which caused Cranshaw and Criswell to laugh.

"Get in," commanded "Ri. "Come right along, Jeremy."

They all climbed into the wagon. John with lips compressed as if he faced an ordeal. And indeed he did. "Ri was quick to perceive what Jeremy in the hysteria of his joy had overlooked. His great, hairy hand fell on John's knee in a tight grip.

"I want to say something while I got the chance. I guess there's more to this than appears to be. But I have faith in ye, John Dunmudee. I have faith that ye'll govern this state in the fear of God and the love of your fellow men."

"Whatever ye do," supplemented Sykes, "I'll believe that."

"An' so long as we got faith in ye ye needn't lose faith in yourself," Criswell concluded.

John did not answer. He was past speaking just then and later when his townsmen acclaimed him.

At home took place a wonder. Judge Dunmudee, almost forgetting the judicial dignity, slapped John on the back and exclaimed: "My son, this is a happy hour. I always knew you would make your mark."

At which Miss Roberta sniffed. But when she tried to convey her felicitations her tongue refused, the unaccustomed office, and she broke away to prepare a supper that should do justice to the occasion.

Baby's awful itching eczema

MILWAUKEE, WIS., Aug. 27, '12. "My little girl had eczema on her little face, when she was three months old until she was two years old. Resinol healed it

"At last I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and before three weeks were past, my baby's face was healed, and is today as white as milk."

At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Engelhardt, at 1:00 o'clock today occurred the marriage of their daughter Mabel, to Ephraim Gilbert. Both are well known by a large circle of friends.

THE DAILY NOVELETTE

THE SIMPERING SEVEN.

By the light of the undying love in her eyes, Lucy Sandelewood arranged seven likenesses of handsome Clarence Kinkleheim on the baby grand piano. She put one here, one there, one over yonder, for if Lucy Sandelewood was strong on anything it was taste.

"My love returns from the East Indies today to claim me as his bride," she murmured, by way of explaining the plot.

Hardly had she adjusted the seventh photograph when the window opened and Clarence Kinkleheim strode into the room. He was all tanned and romantic looking, and as he yanked her masterfully into his strong arms she could barely repress a thrill of pleasure.

"Observe," she said when he had kissed her enough for the first few minutes, "how your seven pictures have been a constant source of inspiration and rapture to me as I let me li'lly fingers stray over the ivories."

"You're a bear!" he cried, lapsing into the strange lingo of the East Indies in his enthusiasm. And again he seized her in a half-Nelson and rained kisses about.

At that moment little Gertrude entered the room, noiseless enough to make no sound.

"Oh, unusual!" she observed, in her innocent childish way, "I observe seven pictures on the piano where hitherto I fail to recollect to having noticed any!"

"Forewell," said Clarence Kinkleheim hastily, and, reaching for his hat, he went out without it.

Gathering the simpering seven in one armful, Lucy Sandelewood hurled them at her little sister with a cry of vexation.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

MENDING HER BROKEN HEART.

This is the story of the woman who welded again her broken heart.

A few years ago Mrs. Norah Burke lived in a comfortable house in an old fashioned street in New York. Life for her was full and joyous. A good husband loved her. Children played about the house. Up the street lived her father and mother. Across the big bridge were a brother and a sister.

Inside of two years came the end of her world.

In that time, strangely enough, husband, children, parents, brother and sister died, and she sat desolate in the old house. It was a house of torturing and pathetic memories and peopled by the vague shadows of the loved and lost.

She almost went mad.

Sleeping or waking, recollection told her weary brain the sad history of bereavement. Finally she groped her way to the church where she was christened and wedded and told the old minister she must have relief or go insane.

"My daughter," said the priest, "when you feel you are going mad go out and find some one sadder than you and try to comfort that one."

"But there is no one."

"Oh, yes, there is! Look around you."

That day she took a car to the most miserable quarters of the east side, and there she found a woman who had hung herself on the dead body of her child, killed by an automobile.

"Where is your husband?" she asked the woman.

"He is in prison for life."

She had found a life sadder than hers. She helped to bury the child, took the woman to her own home, loved her back to sanity and found her world. And every day she sought to comfort some miserable one.

She was too busy to think of her own sorrows.

Finally the authorities, learning of her work, made her probation officer of the juvenile court.

She works eighteen hours a day, and always the old house is overrun with the poor kids of the street. She has no time to brood.

In self forgetfulness she has found her refuge. And it is said there is no sweeter smile on any woman's face.

Thus did "the angel of the children's court" fuse and weld again—in the flame of human pity—the fragments of her broken heart.

The proprietor of a country hotel was gazing with fond admiration at the newly put up sign of the "Golden Lamb," which swung lazily over his door.

"Good morning, brother John," said a neighbor who was passing by. "What be yer thinkin' of?"

"I was thinkin'," said the host, "as how the lamb is a picture of innocence."

At a trial in court when the witness on the stand was being subjected to a merciless cross-examination, in answering one question the witness nodded. Whereupon the court stenographer, who was crowding the limit to get all and could not see the witness, at once demanded: "Answer that question!" to which the witness replied: "I did answer it: I nodded my head."

The stenographer, without a moment's hesitation, came right back with: "Well, I heard it rattle, but could not tell whether it was up and down or from side to side."

A certain professor of divinity who was spending the summer in the Scottish Highlands was invited, so the Yorkshire Post declares, to baptize the infant son of the local minister.

When the time of the ceremony arrived, the guest gave out for congregational singing a paraphrase much favored on such occasions. "Let us," said he, "sing from the fifth paraphrase, beginning at the second verse: 'As sparks in close succession rise.'"

To his consternation, the congregation giggled audibly. Afterward, asking the clerk what he had done wrong, that functionary replied: "You must know, professor, the minister's name is Sparks, and yonder is his tenth bairn!"

"This was overheard by a visitor in a northwestern state: 'Our state prison is now self-supporting,' said the first citizen. 'Good,' said the second citizen. 'In that case we can afford to start a couple more.'"

Socialism, as entertained by most people, is summoned up in a story of two fishermen who were discussing the beauties of the theory. "Sure 'tis the happy time coming," said Fat.

"Tis the brotherhood of man, and the good fellowship of all. If you had twenty thousand dollars you'd let me have tin of them, wouldn't ye, Mike?"

"I would that," said Mike, heartily. "And if you had a hundred horses the half of them would be mine."

"Faith they would." "An' if ye had two pigs, sure ye'd give me one?"

"I would not. Ye know perfectly well I have two pigs."

Several years ago a northern Missouri farmer came to Kansas City to spend a few days, and registered for a room at one of the larger hotels.

When he learned the price he was to pay for the room he was stunned. He considered it an extremely high rate, but since he had already registered he decided not to be a quitter, and kept the room.

The first night, just as the farmer had fallen asleep, the bell boy rushed into his room, turned on the light and exclaimed:

"Get up; Better hurry! The hotel is on fire!"

The man raised himself on one elbow, scratched his head and blinked at the boy. Finally he said:

"Well, if I get up at this time o' night you needn't think I'm goin' to pay you for this here bed."

SPUR-MOMENTA Mean Woman.

"I think that Mrs. Jones is the meanest little cat in this town," remarked Mrs. Plety Hill to her husband.

"How is that, m'dear?" asked Mr. Hill.

"Well, I had fixed up something real sarcastic to say to her about her new hat, and she said the same thing about mine and said it first."

"I'll rise at five o'clock and go right out and shovel off the snow."

But most of them, with souls quite dead.

Lie safe within their beds instead, And do not even deign to blush When passersby wade in the slush.

'Twas Always Thus.

I dwell within a palace grand With hired help on every hand, I ran the place at large expense; The luxury was just immense.

I lived on porterhouse and quail; My chef knew no such word as "fail." I had a splendid limousine, A seven-passenger machine; I also owned a racing car.

And there was nothing to mar My peace of mind. I knew no toll; I didn't have to do a thing From spring to fall and fall to spring.

I had no worry or my mind, Or vain regret of any kind, Or vain regret of any kind, My castle was a sight to see; I had ten men to wait on me, And when I got a bill, by heck,

My secretary wrote a check, I jotted about and took my ease, With bank notes piled up to my knees.

Then something happened suddenly, My wife came in the room and she said as she gave my hair a jerk: "Wake up, you chump, and go to work."

Our Beauty Cream.

Testimonials for our new Beauty Cream are coming in so fast that we have had to hire three burglars to open them. There is only a small amount of territory left on this proposition and those who desire to acquire sales rights should hurry. Following are some of the testimonials:

"Dear Sir: After using one box of your celebrated Beauty Cream, I have grown so young that my husband has been arrested for not sending me to the public schools. They think I am his youngest daughter. May blessings be upon your head."

"Dear Sir: I used your Beauty

Cream twice and met my husband on the street the second afternoon. He thought I was some strange lady, and tried to flirt with me.—Mrs. J.

"Dear Sir: Before using one box of your Beauty Cream I had the homeliest face in our set. Now I am so beautiful that I have had the opportunity to turn down seven theatrical engagements and I am almost afraid to meet Nat Goodwin for I don't want to get married, having one perfectly good husband already.—Mrs. G. Y."

Stingy.

"That Blinks woman is the meanest woman in this town," said Mrs. Jones to her husband as they sat at dinner.

"How so?"

"Well, we were coming out in the car this afternoon and I reached in my bag as though I intended to pay our fares and what do you think the mean little cat did? She let me go on and do it."

WE advise that you do your shopping now and early in the day. Every section of this store is ready to meet your holiday requirements and to assist in a quick solution of your gift problems.
